This really useful volume ["Treaty Ports China and Japan "] is intended as guide for travellers and residents in China and Japan, and as a book of reference for percantile men generally. It contains an account, historical and political, of all the open ports of these countries, together with Peking, Yedo, Hongkong, and Macao. has been carefully compiled and edited by Mr N. B. Dennys; and the elaborate maps and plans, with which the work abounds, considerably enhance its value. * * * We have thus given in outline some o the more prominent portions of the chapter devoted to Canton, as a specimen of the whole volume. Other chapters treating of Macao, Formosa, Ningpo, Shanghae, and the remaind r of the treaty ports, we can only enumerate. The pages describing Peking, the capital, are so interesting, and contain so much that is new to European readers respecting its history, public buildings, and general characteristics, that we would fain transfer them to our columns. A complete and intelligible plan of the Imperial City and neighbourhood, gives us an accurate notion of the relative position of its divisions, streets, and places.

In the introductory chapter to the notices of the Treaty Ports of Japan will be found a succinct history of that Empire, together with remarks on its government, geography and limits, which will be found particularly interesting as throwing a considerable light | each. on a part of the world so long entirely, and kohama, and the other Treaty Ports of | destination. IMPORTANT QUESTION OF MER CANTILE LAW. The case of Darley, Butler & Co. versus

Jones of the Wynagd, recently decided by the District Court of Colombo and now before the Surpreme Court in appeal, in volves principles so important that we are not surprised to learn that if, as is pretty certain, the Supreme Court adheres to the view taken in the case of Meldrum, of the ship Swanley, versus Cargill & Co., leave will be asked (which is certain to be granted) to carry the appeal before the Privy Council his nation's prestige, feel called upon to take The main question seems to be what is included in the exceptions of the Bill of Lading. They run thus: "Fire. all and every other dangers and accidents of the seas, rivers and navigation of whatever nature or kind soever, save risk of boats, so far as ships are liable thereto, excepted. Up to the period of the decision in the case of the Swanley, the principle seems to have been held and acted on here, that accident occasioned by a rough sea while a vessel was in the roadstead unlading was an "accident of the sea." In the case of the Wynaad the charge of negligence was repelled by evidence which could not be questioned, and it is plain from the wording of Mr Lawson's judgment that but for the precedent by which he felt himself bound.

his judgment would be one for the defendant. The law, as laid down by the Supreme Court, would seem to be that unless the ship is wrecked, or damaged out in mid ocean, or at any rate before her anchor is dropped in barbour or roadstead, the goods for which the master of a ship has delivered a bill of lading, must be delivered intact, or the value, total or partial, as the articles are either lost altogether or only damaged, paid to the shipper. A correspondent "Justice" declares the very contrary doctrine to have so invariably ruled the custom here, that he feels justified in severe comments on the Firm which brought this last action. Into that question we cannot follow him ; but we can easily see that the law of the Supreme Court, if finally confirmed will very materially affect questions of insurance and freight. Much sympathy is due to the shipmaster, who after having proved that he is not guilty (by himself or his officers) of even constructive negligence is yet held liable for damage caused by sudden lurch of the sea, as he would be for total loss, we suppose, had the bales of cottan cloth gone to the bottom. But if the law is such as the Supreme Court lays down, it is time it was definitely known and acted on. When ship-owners and masters know that no accident occurring when
